Notes for JOHN JOSEPH CERRITO:

John Joseph 'Giovanni' Cerrito, who for almost a half-century owned the Memphis restaurant "where Italy comes to your table," died of heart failure Sunday at his home. He was 78. Mr. Cerrito, the son of an immigrant who came to Memphis from Sicily, opened the old Cerrito's Restaurant in downtown at Second and Washington more than 50 years ago. He moved the restaurant to the Crosstown area about 35 years ago and renamed it Giovanni's, the Italian translation of his first name. Mr. Cerrito built the restaurant into one of the best-known in the Mid-South and he continued to own and operate it until his retirement in 1988. Giovanni's operation was then taken over by his son, Rudy David Cerrito. The restaurant was moved last year to a new East Memphis location at 4972 Park. In addition to his skills as a restaurateur, Mr. Cerrito's hobbies centered around sports and included shooting pool. He began playing before he could see over a regulation pool table, and at age 12 was Southern pool champion. Mr. Cerrito's brother, the late Joseph Andrew Cerrito, was also a champion pool player as a youngster, and later owned and operated People's Pool Hall, which was on Second and then moved to Beale Street. "But Uncle Joe never could beat daddy at pool," said his daughter, Toni Cerrito. "And I'm sure daddy's up there beating him again right now. "Those were his only hobbies - sports and his three grandchildren, his namesake John Joseph Cerrito, Larry Eugene Dacus and Dina Marie Cerrito. He really just lived for them." Mr. Cerrito was a communicant of St. Mary's Catholic Church on Market. He is also survived by his wife, Josephine Luraschi Cerrito; another daughter, Gloria Cerrito Braswell of Memphis; a sister, Zina Margarita Cerrito of Memphis; and a brother, Anthony Frank Cerrito of Helena, Ark. Mass will be said at 2 p.m. Tuesday at St. Mary's Catholic Church, with burial in Memorial Park. Memphis Funeral Home Union Chapel has charge. (Published in The Commercial Appeal 2/5/1996)
